

Airline Travel Offsets

Every time you fly you are emitting large amounts of carbon into the atmosphere. A number of websites now allow you to offset your carbon emissions associated with air travel.

- Myclimate travel offsets allow you to offset the emissions from your flights and other travel and home activities. The money from the offsets is invested in creating clean, renewable energy resources in developing countries. Myclimate has a video explaining how offsets work and explaining some of their projects. Myclimate offsets are offered through Sustainable Travel International, which is a great resource for consumers interested in green vacations.

Expedia now also offers travel offsets through TerraPass, another offset program. Money from these offsets can go towards renewable energy, methane sequestration, or the purchase and retirement of carbon credits.
